GetChoGrindUp Joins National Center For Simulation

Orlando, FL (February 27th, 2020) - GetChoGrindUp has become a member for the National Center For Simulation (NCS). GetChoGrindUp is an organization that helps students transition from college into the “real world” by providing online content and events that educate its attendees on different career paths. Some of their focus is on the growing Modeling, Simulation, and Game Development industry in Orlando and they’re looking to leverage NCS membership to find companies that would like to recruit talent at their events.

“GetChoGrindUp envisions its content as a supplement to the current education system. Educational Institutions do an amazing job at teaching their students the skills and knowledge to succeed, but seldomly prepare its students for all of the other obstacles that will come up post-grad, such as things like how to actually find a job” said Justin Nguyen, GetChoGrindUp’s CEO. “NCS gives us a platform to further spread this message as well as opens doors for us that may have taken years on our own”.

GetChoGrindUp provides a full range of online content about the student journey from Justin’s personal LinkedIn page, which gets over 200,000 views each month, to their two podcasts, “Declassified College” and “The GetChoGrindUp Podcast”. To complement their online presence, GetChoGrindUp has begun to disrupt what a traditional career fair looks like by creating an event that connects employers to students AND allows the company a platform to talk about the opportunities available. Unlike a traditional career fair, The GetChoGrindUp Xperience makes sure that students who enter, will never leave empty-handed. If they don’t receive a job or internship opportunity, they will leave with the value of learning from industry professionals in their “dream jobs”.
